Bio:

Philly's Heavy Shrug crank out a special brand of noisy, eclectic rock that's as hard to categorize as it is to get out of your head. Their blend of post-hardcore, grunge and late-aughts indie—think Nirvana, Pixies, and gloom-rock contemporaries Pile—interspersed with lilting, atmospheric touches nodding to shoegaze and dream pop, creates something intense at times and pretty at others, but always catchy as hell.

Lead songwriter/singer/guitarist James Keary's lyrics intertwine the personal and political, exploring the anger, anxiety and isolation that come with being forced to feed the fires of capitalism while the world burns down around you. Keary's dynamic vocal range—turning on a dime from gentle to sneering to howling—and the band's hard-hitting and expansive arrangements have earned them a reputation for thrilling live sets in Philly's booming indie/DIY scene.

Heavy Shrug will drop their anticipated debut LP, Viscera, on September 19 via Bad Catt Records.
